Happy Thanksgiving!
This Thursday is Thanksgiving, and we here at The Review wish our readers well.

We will be taking this Thursday and Friday off, but feel free to email if you need to get a hold of us.

Our normal advertising deadlines will return next week.

In the meantime, take this week to be with family and friends, and count your blessings.

Quote of the week ...

Who said this, and what is it about? You can find the quote and the story it belongs to somewhere in the pages of this issue.

"I'd like to see them become liaisons between residents and the department."

Happy Thanksgiving

Ephesians 5:20
Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ;

A Hamtramck Thanksgiving tale ...

By Greg Kowalski

The expression on the turkey's face – if you can call it that – was grim.

The headline above the photo said it all: "Thanksgiving is Doomsday for Him."

That item appeared in the Nov. 23, 1934, issue of the New Deal newspaper to remind readers that Thanksgiving was less than a week away. Surely, the turkey had nothing to be thankful for, and neither did many Hamtramck-ans.

It was the depths of the Great Depression. Ham-tramck, which had such a large industrial base, was particularly hard hit by the Depression. The unemployment rate was somewhere near 60 percent.

But there's an old saying: "When everybody's poor, nobody is poor."

The shared misery made the suffering more bearable for all. And life did go on.

Art's Hardware store offered a "Special for Thanksgiving," a blue enameled roaster perfect for cooking the Thanksgiving bird for just 79 cents.

Time grows shorter for financial plan

By Charles Sercombe

What would it take to balance the city's budget?

Try a 20 percent across-the-board wage and benefit cut for all city employees and retirees.

That's the magic number to wipe away the city's financial woes, said Acting City Manager Kyle Tertzag.

And just what are the chances of employees and pensioners agreeing to that reduction? You probably have a better chance winning the lottery before that happens.

City officials are still at odds over how to reduce a projected $3 million budget shortfall and avoid payless paydays. The city applied for a $3 million emergency state loan, but without a solid budget deficit elimination plan in place, Tertzag said there is little chance of receiving the loan.

"The state isn't going to give a loan without one," Tertzag said.

Tertzag said that at this point, it looks like the city will run out of money by no later than March. It could even happen earlier, sometime in January, he said.

Since state voters shot down a revamped emergency manager law, Gov. Rick Snyder has said he will allow communities to simply fall into bankruptcy – an action

DTE given a deadline on sidewalks

By Charles Sercombe

City officials aren't taking it anymore.

They want DTE Energy to step up its installation of utility lines and more importantly, get those torn up sidewalks repaved.

Or else.

Acting City Manager Kyle Tertzag said he and Department of Public Works Director Steve Shaya met with DTE recently to talk about the delay in repaving sidewalks. Tertzag said that if DTE does not speed up the repairs, the city will hire a contractor to get the job done and that the bill will be passed onto DTE.

Shaya said they gave DTE a deadline of Dec. 21.

DTE began an extensive installation of new gas lines during the summer. The work has caused a major inconvenience for many residents who were forced to park their cars on streets away from theirs.

"People were complaining about not enough parking and wondering what the city was doing," Shaya said in regards to what prompted him to approach DTE.

Shaya estimated that about half of the city's sidewalks have been torn up to make way for the gas lines.

"In the long run, you're getting new gas lines and new sidewalks," Shaya said about the upside of the inconvenience. "Yeah, it's a headache."

A Hamtramck Thanksgiving tale ...

And Club Variety was holding a Thanksgiving Dance at the St. Augustine Parish Hall at Justice and Davison, just north of Hamtramck. Admission was only 35 cents, and you had a chance to win five live turkeys in a grand drawing.

That was pretty typical for Thanksgiving. Unlike Christmas or Easter, Thanksgiving has been a more personal holiday. Then, like now, Thanksgiving was a time for family gatherings, sharing dinner together and relaxing (providing you didn't have to do the cooking or the cleanup).

Times were tough in the Great Depression, and finding something to be thankful for surely must have been a challenge. By the time the Great Depression was finally lifting, the nation was faced with another challenge. World War II erupted. Throughout the war years you find few references to Thanksgiving in the newspapers. Stores didn't promote sales much as there wasn't much to sell. Everything was being directed to the war effort. Even scraps of silver foil gum wrappers and old tires were collected and recycled.

It was only in the post-war era, nearly 20 years after the Depression hit, that the season began to take on a really festive air. Then it became not just turkey time, but the date to officially usher in the Christmas holidays.

Long-time Hamtramckans will remember Lenzon's dime store on Jos. Campau.

In 1948 – a typical post-war year – Lenzon's promoted its Talk Turkey Sale. That included a cake platter and cover for $1.59, ladies' aprons for $1 and a box of Brach's chocolate covered cherries for 89 cents. Similar sales were held in stores all through town.

Thanksgiving also has kicked off the season of giving. The Goodfellows would – and still do – prepare for their annual sales to ensure all children get a gift at Christmas. For years the Torch Drive collected donations for charitable causes, and there were numerous charitable activities. Even Santa got into the act, as he came into town for the annual Hamtramck Thanksgiving Parade that was held for years.

But all of this was a sort of dressing for the turkey. What really mattered was the spirit of the season. This was expressed eloquently in, of all places, a newspaper ad for the Borco Market which was on Six Mile, and advertised in The Citizen.

The ad ran in 1953, and read, in part:

"Let us approach this Thanksgiving Day in the spirit of the Pilgrim Fathers. Let us enjoy the feast, of course; the family reunions, the gatherings with friends. But let us not lose sight of the inspiration and true purpose of this occasion: gratefully to give thanks to God for the blessings we have received.

"Each of us will find his own personal blessings for which to be thankful.

"All of us share in those paramount blessings that come to us as Americans.

"A free people, we walk in dignity and sleep at peace and without fear. We are free to know the truth and speak our minds about it. We are free to choose our own work.

"We are free to grow, to create, to achieve... each to the utmost of his own ability, with no shackles of regimentation to curb his ambition or thwart his progress.

"These freedoms are the strength of America. They are the priceless blessings enjoyed by every American. For them on this Thanksgiving Day... let us give thanks to God, from whom all blessings flow."

Amen.

Just call them 'The God Squad'

By Ian Perrotta

There are a few fresh faces in Hamtramck's Police Department.

Recently, Police Chief Max Garbarino filled the newly-created position of Police Chaplain with not one but three members of the local clergy. It is the first time the department has had a chaplain.

According to Garbarino, the three chaplains will play a vital role in helping the department with not only victim services, but counseling officers as well. Garbarino says a lot of departments already have chaplains, and it was just a matter of time before Hamtramck caught up.

As for the services the chaplains will offer, Garbarino says he hopes they can become experts in helping people after they become the victim of a crime. Garbarino says that due to a heavy workload, oftentimes officers are unable to provide victims with continued support because they must deal with the next crime.

"My hope is that the chaplains eventually become experts in helping victims cope and get resources, as well as break down barriers between officers and the community," says Garbarino. "I'd like to see them become liaisons between residents and the department."

In order for that to happen, the chaplains must first become ingrained in the department. This will be accomplished by having them interact with officers and the community on a regular basis, whether it's by going on ride-alongs with officers or being on call for counsel in the event of a tragedy.

Perhaps the best news to come out of this development is the fact that it will cost taxpayers nothing. The three chaplains – Rev. Bogdan Milosz of Our Lady Queen of Apostles, Darla Swint of Corinthian Baptist Church, and Rev. Sharon Buttry of Acts 29 – are all volunteering their time free of charge.

Additional good news should come soon, as Garbarino says the department is also looking for an Islamic imam to provide services to Hamtramck's Muslim population. A few applications are currently being considered.

"We are long overdue for this," said Garbarino. "Chaplains can provide services that our officers can't."

that he previously opposed.

But, state legislators are also working on adopting a new emergency manager law that they think voters will be likely to accept. The proposed law would allow cities to vote to have the state step in.

Councilmember Cathie Gordon conceded that at this point there is little that can be done.

"We're in limbo," she said.

Schools superintendent confident about his replacement

By Charles Sercombe

Hamtramck Public Schools Superintendent Tom Niczay said there isn't much more to say about his retirement.

Last week, Niczay announced he would not seek another employment contract when his expires next December in 2013. He told the school board that he is stepping down, and that the board should begin looking for his replacement.

Niczay has been with the district for 35 years. The Review asked him to elaborate on his decision.

"The decision to retire is not sudden," Niczay said in an email. "I love being an administrator, a Hamtramck Public School administrator. I look forward to going to work. ... I'll be 60 years old when my contract expires in a year, and I just want to give the district ample time to find a replacement. The average tenure for a superintendent is three years. It's not a big deal."

As for his successor, Niczay said he is confident that the board will make the right appointment.

"The district will find a good fit replacement. I'm not leaving for many months," Niczay said. "My replacement could come from within or from outside the district. That's the board's decision. The Board of Education has committed and smart people on it."

Niczay has been superintendent for five years. He started out in the district as a teacher and worked his way up to assistant principal and then principal.

As for the future of the district, which has seen a decline in student enrollment in recent years, Niczay said there is a good chance the district will indeed become smaller still.

"Hamtramck Public Schools might become smaller but HPS does have a future," he said. "Walk around any HPS building and you will see great administrators, teachers, support staff and most importantly great kids."

School district finances are improving, but that could change

By Charles Sercombe

After six years of a growing budget deficit, it looks like things are looking up for the Hamtramck Public School District.

That was the message at last week's board meeting when an audit of the 2012 budget was reviewed.

Despite the uptick, the district is dealing with a projected $4.9 million budget deficit.

Superintendent Tom Niczay and his administration have been working on a budget deficit elimination plan, and he said he will present a revised plan to the board at the December meeting.

Niczay said that if things go as predicted the district should be able to balance its budget by 2015.

But, Yes, there is a but. Niczay cautioned that there are several plans being kicked around in the state legislature that could work against the district. One plan being considered by Gov. Rick Snyder is to base state revenue sharing on student performance.

The district now receives about $6,800 per student, which is down from $7,300 a few years ago.

If state revenue is tied to student performance, it could quickly bankrupt the district. Hamtramck's students have not been high achievers.

Niczay said what the state fails to take into consideration the city's poverty rate, which can have a huge impact on how students score on tests.

"It's fundamentally unfair," Niczay said.

Coming events

Local veterans serve up a Thanksgiving dinner for fellow vets

By Ian Perrotta

Nothing says "thanks" like a hearty, home-cooked meal.

Keeping that in mind, PLAV Post 10 and the Hamtramck Allied Veterans Council were at the Piquette Square for Veterans last Sunday (Nov. 18) to serve residents a Thanksgiving dinner - with a little Hamtramck twist.

Post 10's chef Dave Pomainville whipped up a huge spread of turkey, stuffing, mashed potatoes and gravy, yams, green beans, cranberry relish, salad and dessert. A giant tray of flaky angel wings and a pan full of Polish sausage and sauerkraut topped it all off. About 130 meals were served in all.

After a number of years hosting a similar event in Battle Creek, this was the second year the two groups have teamed up at Piquette Square. The tradition is expected to continue indefinitely.

Judging by the smiling vets and empty plates after the meal, there won't be any complaints. The food was as good as it looked, and with a boisterous group watching the Lions game in the background it was hard not to think it actually was Thanksgiving.

"You can't give enough thanks back to groups like Post 10 and the HAVC," said Veterans Resource Facilitator Chery Allen. "We wouldn't be able to survive without the community support we receive."

Members of the Hamtramck Allied Veterans Council and PLAV Post 10 were at the Piquette Square for Veterans last Sunday (Nov. 18) to serve Thanksgiving dinner.

What is the Piquette Square for Veterans?

As part of the Southwest Solutions network, Piquette Square for Veterans is a 150-bed residential facility that helps homeless, honorably discharged veterans get back on their feet.

The one-stop shop provides a variety of resources to help navigate the difficulties of life after active duty, including help with education, job training and finances. Monthly meetings keep residents up-to-date on new programs and opportunities, and one-on-one sessions help ensure each individuals' goals are met.

The center was opened in June of 2010 and currently houses veterans from the Vietnam all the way up to the present-day wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Say 'thanks' to a city that knows how to survive

It's been said many, many times in this town. "We are survivors."

Yes, Hamtramckans know how to survive tough times, and this city has been tested time and time again. Hamtramck is once again facing a financial hardship. Heck — it has been for the last two or three years.

We have hope, but things look pretty grim these days. That's because there has been a huge loss of good jobs in recent years. And our housing values have all sunk to record lows.

Yet, we carry on.

This Thursday is Thanksgiving, and we believe we still have plenty to be thankful for.

For one thing, Hamtramck's residents are a hardworking bunch who will help a neighbor and friend out in a moment's notice.

We are also one of the most interesting cities in the metro area — maybe even in the nation. There is nowhere else outside of New York or Chicago where you will find such ethnic diversity.

What makes each of us so different is where we draw our collective strength. Our diversity forces us to get along, and it expands our vision of the world.

In Hamtramck, all you have to do is take a walk around the block to see the world.

This week, be sure to say thanks for living in such a wonderful city.

Odds & Ends

It's a wonderful light ... For the past two weeks Downtown Development Authority Director Darren Grow and volunteer Chris Cervenak have been busy stringing lights on poles all along Jos. Campau, and today (Nov. 21) they'll get turned on.

Though not all poles will be lit at first — Grow said there are 15-30 with damaged GFI plugs — beginning next week an electrician will start repairs, and within two weeks all poles should be shining bright.

Other Voices: Guest Editorial

New school financing rules are a 'power grab'

(Editor's note: We asked Hamtramck Public Schools Superintendent Tom Niczay to comment on some of the recent proposals on school financing being discussed by Gov. Rick Snyder and state legislators.)

By Tom Niczay

Gov. Snyder is looking at a performance-based funding method for public schools. That information comes from the Oxford Foundation which is a committee established to create The Michigan Public School Finance Act of 2013.

Plans call for eliminating student enrollment restrictions based on residency, meaning every student in the state would be permitted to enroll in any public school without the approval of their home district. The plan is to eventually destroy community schools and create a state-wide school district.

What is even worse and totally outrageous are bills the lame duck legislature is trying to quickly pass. House Bill 6004 and Senate Bill 1358 allow the EAA — Education Achievement Authority — to be exempt from statewide testing requirements, meaning they do not have to take the MEAP or the MME.

It also excuses some certified teacher requirements. This creates different standards for EAA schools. The proposed bills also require all school districts to notify the Michigan Department of Education if a school building previously used for classroom instruction is closed, unused or unoccupled.

The state would take control of local school buildings paid for with local dollars. The EAA would be allowed to acquire property without approval of the local government in which that property is located. The EAA may control, hold, manage, maintain, operate, repair, secure, demolish, or take any action necessary to preserve their rights and interest in that property.

The general public needs to know what Lansing Republicans are trying to do. It is a political power grab. It is a property and land grab. The EAA has no history or ability to improve school performance. There is a glaring lack of quality assurances.

City Hall Insider ...

What is our City Council up to these days? We have the scoop and the highlights — as well as the lowlights — of the latest council meeting.

By Charles Sercombe

Here's part two of the Nov. 13 city council meeting. Councilmember Tom Jankowski was absent. The meeting ran for three hours.

Councilmember Robert Zwolak proposed reinstating Mike Wilk as city treasurer and giving him a salary.

Acting City Manager Kyle Tertzag pointed out that the council can't reinstate Wilk because he is still treasurer. Tertzag said he has already been working on a compensation package for Wilk and will have it ready for approval at the next council meeting.

The council unanimously OK'd spending up to $15,000 to replace the audio and video system used to broadcast council meetings.

Councilmember Zwolak demanded that all legal documents be returned to the City Clerk's Office.

City Attorney James Allen said the city does not have the room to store all of the legal documents. He also added that he needs to have access to documents.

Councilmember Cathie Gordon suggested the council come up with a list of documents it wants.

"We have to be kind of specific," she said.

Councilmembers Anam Miah, Mohammed Hassan and Abdul Algazali voted against the proposal, which defeated the motion.

Department of Public Works Director Steve Shaya proposed expanding the number of streets to be plowed, including Denton St. where a charter school is located.

Mayor Karen Majewski questioned the need to spend money on Denton just because there is a school located there. She noted other streets where schools are located do not get plowed.

Shaya said that Denton St. is a fire route, and plowing the street would complete "the circle."

Councilmember Miah noted that other cities don't plow streets where schools are located.

"We don't have buckets of money," he said. "It comes down to cost."

Councilmember Gordon insisted that the city's road repair fund can cover the cost. (It was also argued that it doesn't.)

The vote passed with Councilmembers Gordon, Hassan and Zwolak voting in favor.

In a report from Acting City Manager Tertzag, he praised City Clerk Marie Kendzierski for doing a good job during the recent election.

Tertzag also said that he and Steve Shaya have talked with DTE Energy about the slow pace of sidewalk repairs. The utility company has been digging up sidewalks to install new gas lines.

Tertzag said he told the company that unless sidewalk repairs are not sped up, the city will make the repairs and then bill the company.

Shaya said DTE has until Dec. 21 to finish the repairs.

Metro news ...

It's said that whatever happens to Detroit, so goes Hamtramck. If you were to rely solely on the local mainstream media, you'd think Detroit is no more than a crime-infested wasteland. Well, we're here to say that isn't so. Our friends over at modeldmedia.com and metro-mode.com have been reporting on fascinating development projects for the past few years.

With their permission, here is an edited version of this week's story:

The Hamtramck Recycling & Transfer Center is getting close to opening and expects to create a few dozen jobs when it begins operations in 2013.

The green business is refurbishing an old waste-transfer building at the corner of Hamtramck Drive and Denton St. The 32,000-square-foot building will pick out a number of recyclable materials from industrial waste, such as metal, cardboard, paper and plastics. The idea is to profit off of the wasted commodities that too often end up in the garbage.

"There is not really anybody who specializes in industrial waste," says Seth Kruger, president of Hamtramck Recycling & Transfer Center. "A lot of manufacturers are looking for ways to find less of their material end up in a landfill."

The Hamtramck Recycling & Transfer Center is a family owned business that has been in the works for the last year. It currently employs 11 people and expects to employ as many as 42 when it's going full steam. The company hopes to begin operations in early 2013 and is looking to hire primarily local residents. So far about 50 percent of the firm's current workforce calls Hamtramck home.

"We're ramping up our employment to operate our system," Kruger says. "We will be hiring as the intake of material increases."

The project received $470,000 in Brownfield tax credits last year from the state of Michigan. When the project began, the building had been vacant for several years and had fallen into significant disrepair.

Knights of Columbus visits with seniors and vets, build a home

Hamtramck's Knights of Columbus have been super busy recently.

Here's a rundown of Cardinal Mercier 2723 have been up to:

They received an award at the St. Patrick Senior Center, the 2012 Jean King Award. This was for cooking and feeding the seniors there. About 100-120 seniors enjoy a meal every Easter and other dates throughout the year. K of C donated turkeys to Father Bogdan Milosz Queen of Apostles Parish.

The organization visited the VA Hospital in Detroit and delivered care packages for the vets and thanked them for their service.

K of C also teamed up with WXYZ Channel 7 and helped build a Habitat for Humanity home in the I-94 and Chalmers area.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING CITY OF HAMTRAMCK

The City of Hamtramck is holding a Public Hearing on Tuesday, November 27, 2012 at 7:00 p.m. in the City Council Chambers on the 2nd Floor of City Hall, 3401 Evaline, Hamtramck, MI 48212, to receive comments from the public on a proposed pawn shop, second hand dealer/precious gems and metals ordinance.

The public is invited to attend and comment on the proposal during the Public Hearing or to make written comments before November 26, 2012. Written comments should be made to the attention of the City Clerk, 3401 Evaline, Hamtramck, MI 48212.
