Quick Hits

Get your walking shoes on this Saturday morning, and take a Health Hike around the city.

The annual 5k Hamtramck Health Hike kicks off on April 22 at Keyworth Stadium, starting at 9 a.m. It's rain or shine, so be prepared if storm clouds threaten.

There will also be a Health Fair from 10 a.m. to noon at the Hamtramck Community Health Center, as well as a police K9 demonstration at 11 a.m.

Also being offered are games and activities for the kids and a free lunch.

There's no parking at Keyworth, and this is a pet-free event.

Come on out and enjoy some fresh spring air.

Quote of the week ...

Who said this, and what is it about? You can find the quote and the story it belongs to somewhere in the pages of this issue.

"It's a real place where people actually live."

Potholes are back, but the city is already taking care of business

By Charles Sercombe

They're back, and growing.

Even though we had a mild winter, it still took a toll on the city's roads. Potholes are now popping up throughout the city.

But the city is on top of it, so there is no need to call out the all-volunteer Hamtramck Guerilla Pothole Repair Crew – at least not yet.

Hamtramck is not alone in experiencing a pothole problem. According to a recent Detroit Free Press story, the Michigan pothole hotline (888-296-4546) has been swamped with calls.

A work crew began this week to cold patch the worst of the streets.

Not only are potholes back, the city's road repair plan for this year has already begun.

Now that warm weather has returned, the city's street repair program is back on the road this year. The city will also start up an alley repair program that will focus first along Jos. Campau.

The center portion of Holmes and Dorothy will be replaced.

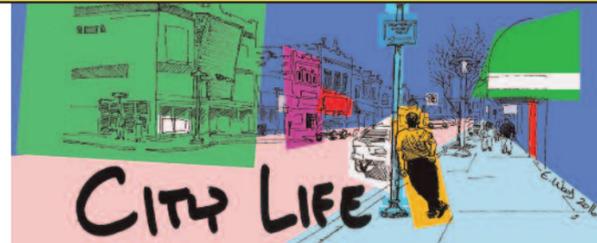

Also coming down the pike will be the resurfacing of Charest, between Holbrook and Evaline; Lehman from Conant to Jos. Campau; and Lumpkin from Caniff to Com-

mor. City Manager Katrina Powell is meeting with the city's engineering consultants to get an update on all of the street and alley improvement projects coming soon.

"We will be very busy this summer with approximately three to five streets being improved and our long anticipated alley reconstruction program starting in our business districts of Jos.

CITY LIFE

Making mistakes, learning and growing

By Walter Wasacz

Last Saturday, while I wandered around Pope Park amid signs demanding that the president release his taxes, on a day when demonstrations like this were held across the country, I ran into activist-artist Liza Bielby.

I think the last time I saw her was across the street from this same spot during the last Polish Day parade. Liza knows something about how to start a conversation in a public place.

She was wearing a sign then that read "talk to me about paradise." So we did, for a just a minute, before moving on to more mundane things (which, because the dialogue took place over seven months ago, I have almost completely forgotten. But I did remember the sign).

Today, Liza was looking for her partner Richard Newman. We decided to get coffee at Oloman Cafe and wait for him there. Liza and Richard are co-founders of the Hinterlands, the live performance ensemble based in Banglatown.

The group is part of the Carpenter Exchange, along with Power House Productions, Carrie Morris Productions and Pops Packing, partners in a collaborative project that produced the Porous Borders Festival in 2015.

They were in the neighborhood for the protest and to have a quick lunch before returning to the Play House on Moran St. for rehearsals. In a few weeks, The Hinterlands are presenting encore performances of "The Radicalization Process," a multi-layered investigative theater piece that focuses on the intersection of art and politics of the Election deadline is nearing

By Charles Sercombe

Anyone interested in running for city council or the mayor's position better get your nominating petitions in order.

The deadline to file for office is next Tuesday (April 25) no later than 4 p.m. Candidates who have second thoughts about the election can drop out through Friday, April 28.

Besides the mayor's position, there are three seats on council open for election. Councilmembers Andrea Karpinski and Ian Perrotta have said they will seek re-election.

Councilmember Mohammed Hassan has said he will seek the mayor's job, although at press time Thursday he had yet to file for the position. According to sources, Hassan may opt out of the mayor's race and instead seek another term on council.

Mayor Karen Majewski has also said she will seek another term. She has served three terms so far, and is the first woman in the history of the city to fill that position.

So far, only Asm "Kamal" Rahman, who works for the City of Detroit, has filed for mayor.

In the city council race the following have filed: Gias Talukder, Mohammed Al-Somiri and Akil Al-Halemi.

It is likely there will be enough candidates on board to require a primary election in August.

The city is poised to make history again. In the last election round, the council became the first council in the country to be a Muslim majority. National and international news outlets reported on the election result and many media outlets have reported on the cultural mix in the city.

The largest active voting bloc is those of the Muslim faith. It is quite possible for candidates of the Muslim faith to gain the mayor's position and the remainder of the council seats.

Hamtramck's demographics have changed in the last several years to where Bengali-Americans are the dominant ethnic group living here.

For several decades the city was known as a Polish-American town. That population began filtering out in droves in the 1980s to the suburbs of Warren and Sterling Heights.

Immigrants from Yemen have also been moving into the city in recent years.

Rounding out those of the Muslim faith are Bosnian-Americans, many of whom emigrated here in the 1990s to escape the civil war in their country.

While there may be a sea change in the political landscape, there will be one constant in place: Financial oversight by the state-appointed Receivership Transition Advisory Board.

The city council has little authority, and the city manager does not have to answer to the council. It's not clear how long the RTAB will be in place.

Campau and Conant," Powell said.

"In addition, we will continue with our road striping program by painting additional crosswalks and stop bars placed along major residential collector streets."

This is an awkward moment for the city administration though. The director of Public Works, Mark Ragsdale, is leaving for a new job, and Powell's employment contract will expire on June 30.

At this point it's unclear if the state will step in and extend her contract. The city is still under state financial supervision.

Hamtramck High School News

The following information is from Ms. Jaleelah Hassan Ahmed, ELL Director for Hamtramck Public Schools:

I am proud to share the success of the English Language Learners at Hamtramck High School during the Henry Ford College Engineering Competition that took place on April 15.

The English Language Learners (ELLs) usually take time to develop proficiency in the English language. It takes ELLs at least 5-7 years to learn English.

The ELL Department Goals are to build on the students' strengths. We are looking to promote the math and science fields to the ELLs while they develop proficiency in the English language.

Interestingly, a recent study by the National Foundation for American Policy found that 83% (33 out of 40) of the finalists of the 2016 Intel Science Talent Search were the children of immigrants.

The competition organized each year by the Society of Scientists and the public is the leading science competition for U.S. high school students.

With this understanding, Hamtramck High School has partnered with Henry Ford College to have the ELL high school students participate in the Engineering Competition. Additionally, the Yemeni American Committee has supported our efforts, so we were very fortunate to have these collaborations.

The first step included the engineering director at HFC, Dr. Hassan Nameghi, visiting the students for an hour at Hamtramck High School to share the different types of engineering to generate interest and promote the completion.

Next, teachers generated a list of students interested in participating in the Henry Ford College Engineering Competition. The students will meet for at least 2-3 times a week to develop a prototype that is centered around solving a problem. The teams consisted of 3-5 students. HFC covered the costs of up to $100 for each team.

Mrs. Marianne Livezey, a recently hired Math ESL teacher, graciously took ownership and led the HHS Engineering Teams to success. She worked with 3 teams and all 3 teams entered the competition.

On April 15, the HHS team competed with Dearborn and two other teams. HHS teams won 1st Place and 3rd Place. The seniors in the winning teams received a $1,000 scholarship to HFC and each received an engineering kit and certificates.

The experience was fascinating for the students. They are excited to participate in next year's competition and appreciate the engineering field. They have already started networking with college professors and are eager to learn more about this field.

The engineering teams will visit HFC in May and tour the Engineering Department. They will meet with college professors in mechanical, civil, industrial and systems engineering. The seniors will have the chance to fill out applications and talk to counselors to ensure that there is a pathway from high school to college.

The partnership with Henry Ford College and the Yemeni American Committee supports our goals and initiatives as a district. We are proud of the passion and dedication of the HPS teachers. Mrs. Livezey is an example of the exceptional teachers in our district who set high expectations for all students and take on this challenge and lead our students to success. It really does take a village to raise a child.

Early Childhood Elementary School

A special congratulations goes to Devin Coleman in Mrs. Rosemary Haacke's first grade class, who won first place in the 2017 Future Chef's Competition baking competition for his age division.

With the help of sponsor, Ms. Alice Dembowski from ECE, Devin baked a strawberry Kool-Aid pie that won the judges hearts! The judges described the pie as "delicious down to the last bite."

Devin was recognized at the Hamtramck School Board meeting on April 12 and was presented with a certificate by Mr. Niczay for his great accomplishment.

Last week, Sue Dobbstein from The Assistance League in Rochester, Michigan visited Mrs. Michelle Cook and Ms. Janice Rakoczy's classrooms.

Both teachers were winners of the Assistance League's grants and were awarded $1,000 each to use in the classroom. Many wonderful hands-on materials were purchased for the students to use all year and for many years to come.

The Month of the Young Child is being celebrated at ECE with various activities including a parent-student poetry project and mystery readers reading poetry to the students.

Students are busily collecting money for Pennies for Patients, a charity that helps in research and the cure for The Leukemia and Lymphoma Society.

School district increases spraying for cockroaches

By Charles Sercombe

A lapse in spraying for cockroaches at the Early Childhood Elementary School led to an infestation surge recently.

But school officials say they have since doubled down on spraying, and the problem seems to be abated. That admission came up at last week's monthly School Board meeting.

"As soon as we found out, we upped it," said School Superintendent Tom Niczay about spraying the school. "We are sincere; we are serious and will follow the guidelines, not cut corners."

A parent, Emily Wooten, had contacted local media outlets about the incident, and spoke to the board about the problem. She has a son who attends the school, and for several weeks had to change his clothing when he got home.

"Almost every day my son came home saying he's seen cockroaches in the lunchroom," Wooten said. "I was concerned they would be brought home."

Niczay added that all of the public school buildings will be aggressively sprayed, including the use of pesticides.

"We have a program in place," he said.

The ECE building, on McDougall, was purchased by the school district 20 years ago from the Immaculate Conception Ukrainian Catholic Parish, which operated a school there for many years.

Most of the district's buildings are decades old, but there has never been a problem about cockroach infestation made public before last week.

School officials are aggressively spraying for cockroaches at the the Early Childhood Elementary School on McDougall after parents and students complained.

Hamtramck was part of nationwide Trump protest

By Charles Sercombe

The Trump protest movement came to Hamtramck once again.

Protesters hit the streets nationwide on Saturday, demanding that President Trump live up to his campaign promise to release his income tax records.

Trump reneged on that promise once he took office. He is the first presidential candidate in 40 years to not release tax records.

He has insisted that only reporters are interested in seeing his taxes. His resistance to following precedence has led some critics to accuse him of having something to hide.

About 100 people showed up at Pope Park, most of whom bore signs demanding the release of his taxes and also sporting other slogans and comments about the president. A number of speakers also rallied the crowd.

"We're against fascism," said one speaker. "We want a United States of America."

A short march was held up and down part of Jos. Campau, with the crowd chanting, "Hey, hey, ho, ho, Donald Trump has got to go."

There were no reported incidents of violence, although a vehicle with two or three pro-Trump supporters, wearing Trump masks, drove by the gathering several times and lightly taunted them.

Many drivers honked in support of the protesters.

Nationwide protests against Trump's immigration policy are expected to take place on May Day, which is May 1. It was not immediately known if anyone is organizing a protest in Hamtramck.

On Saturday protesters came out to Pope Park to demand that President Trump release his income tax forms.

Free sports clinic for kids is coming at historic stadium site

Kids, want to start your spring right?

Friends of Historic Hamtramck Stadium is hosting a sports clinic for kids 7 to 14 years old on Saturday, April 29 at the historic stadium site in Veterans Memorial Park.

It's being called "Spring Into Action In H-Town," and the event will feature lessons in soccer, baseball and softball.

Guests include former

Detroit Tiger Ike Blesit and the Hamtramck Warriors soccer team.

There is no charge and a free lunch will also be provided. The fun starts at 10:30 a.m. and runs to 2:30 p.m.

Kids can also sign up for this summer's programs offered by the Hamtramck Recreation Department.

City can't afford to lose this store

The Family Dollar store at 9028 Jos. Campau is slated to close on June 2, 2017 because Dollar Express, which owns the store, will be transferred to Dollar General.

This store is always very busy and well-managed and has operated for many years in Hamtramck.

We can ill afford to lose this business and hope it would continue to operate here as Dollar General.

City manager deserves to have her contract extended

Before I address my subject, I need to make it very clear, this article is not the opinion of the Hamtramck Committee of the NAACP. The NAACP does not address any business issues without being expressly contacted to do so and it is thought to be a human rights issue. Nor does the NAACP endorse any candidates for any election. Moving on ...

I have been following the work history of our City Manager Katrina Powell since she was hired in her current position. Personally, I feel she has done a great job.

I have experienced the workings of our city much longer than anyone on the City Council and the progress Ms. Powell has made in and for our city has never been done before. The fact she inherited years of dysfunctional management speaks volumes to her ability and loyalty to our city.

She has continued to be as transparent as possible with the entire community when it comes to the implementation of new ordinances in the city. She is one of the few the community at large can call and either speak with her or leave a message and she actually returns the call.

She attends Town Hall meetings and addresses whatever issues are brought before her with answers that are sound. You are also able, if you care to research what she says, find she is on target with what she has disseminated. For the first time in many years, our city has a financial surplus.

We must admit under Ms. Powell's management, the city is once again on the road to a full recovery.

To read that any member of City Council would have objections to renewing Ms. Powell's employment contract is plain ludicrous. Very poor professionalism.

In my opinion it speaks volumes to the knowledge of one's business experience and ethics. I'm sure there is much in our city management that currently still needs to be addressed — as in any other business that has lacked sound good management for the years Hamtramck has.

Nothing worth building is built over night. However, progression should be visible and under Ms. Powell's management, we have been able to see the progression of our city on the road to recovery.

When I read members of the City Council would rather pay a hefty fine to the State of Michigan before they renew an employee's contract, especially an employee who has done so much in a short period of time — it leaves me to wonder what is the true motive behind such madness.

It truly does appear to be personal as well as attempting to take control of the city. It is a fact Ms. Powell does not back down on her decision making. She always appears to have knowledge of whatever the issue on hand may be and with the interest of the city as her number one priority, she makes her decisions.

She truly has done her research of our city's history. Still, I'm sure many mistakes on Ms. Powell's part have been made, but he who has a clear record of living a life free of mistakes, let that person cast a stone at Ms. Powell.

The task of being the lead person of any micro or macro business is a

In Our Opinion

Time is running out to bring back stability in city hall

An exodus, of sorts, is happening in city hall. And it all centers around the uncertainty of who will be the city manager once the current city manager's contract expires on June 30.

The city's director of public works is going, as is the financial director. The city treasurer's contract is also expiring on June 30.

So far, a bare majority of the city council are blocking the extension of City Manager Katrina Powell's contract. This has led to some administrators leaving because the city does not appear to be stable.

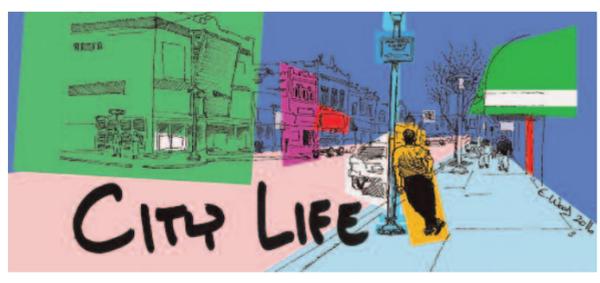

Hamtramck has been under the financial control of the state for over four years. This growing vacuum in the administration isn't exactly reassuring. The state Treasury Department is threatening to call in a $2 million state-issued loan if the city does not have a full-time, qualified city manager in place.

That move could send Hamtramck straight back into a financial crisis, and for the third time in 15 years require the state to further intervene. Hamtramck has to get out of this cycle of instability. Something has to break here.

It could come in the form of some of those on city council who are opposed to keeping Powell on board changing their mind.

Or it could be the Treasury Department steps in and takes that action.

It would make more sense to settle this issue locally. There is still time left, but the clock is ticking.

late 1960s and 1970s. In the patio we talked about their recent trip to China, where they attended an outdoor party in Sichuan province featuring wonderful food. "Some of the best food in the world comes from there," Liza said. "At some point clouds rolled in and it began to rain during the event."

"Some people brought a tent to shelter the cooks grilling the food," Richard said, "but the party never slowed down."

We were talking about public life in America, contrasting it with how it is experienced in China or elsewhere. Bringing the point even closer to home, I steered the conversation to public life in Hamtramck, where we have unique opportunities to expand the range of social interaction and community engagement.

Why wouldn't a rainstorm interrupt an outdoors event in China? Well, surely it did for some, but because of population density hundreds, perhaps thousands, of people remained when the weather changed.

Hamtramck is dense as well, by contemporary American standards, a city of neighborhoods, business districts, food, art, music, ethnic and religious institutions. Density is one of our greatest assets. Opportunities abound here to test the limits of public life.

One way is for the city to become a staging area for protest and demonstration. Why?

"It's a real place," Liza said, as we walked from Pope Park to the cafe, "where people actually live."

Another is to use the streets day and night all year round. Let's just start with this: from the time spring breaks, let's say around now, mid- to late-April, until the leaves have all fallen from the trees in mid-November, we should be outside.

That means walking, running, biking; that means eating, drinking and dancing. Imagine Jos. Campau filled with foot traffic, people walking its length heading to an art opening, a book signing, a lecture or a panel discussion, a performance by a local band or one from Europe or Australia or wherever else around the world.

Or less sexy but vitally important to everyday life is the opportunity to walk for fresh produce, a dozen brown eggs or to find a screwdriver at the hardware store.

It's already happening, but we are only a fraction of the way there, far from the critical mass or elusive tipping points talked about by urban strategists.

Since training, rehearsal and, finally, performance are integral to The Hinterlands identity, without much prompting our conversation turned on a word I've been thinking a lot about lately: practice.

I have loosely defined what I do as a writer, walkable discovery advocate and community engager as my art practice. But is it really art? Or am I devaluing it, making it appear frivolous, by calling it art?

On a larger plane of experience it is life practice, meaning everything I do, the activities in which I experience and participate, the people I meet, grow with or separate from, are all part of this practical rhythm of city life: simply living every day, day after day, meeting each new adventure head on.

I believe community love has to be practiced to remain alive, too. How can we love other people, in interpersonal relationships, as friends and colleagues, or in the place we choose to live, unless we are exercising our hearts and minds on the inside, making real mistakes on the outside, learning and growing from internal and external experience alike?

That's a question we left to ponder on a sunny day in springtime as we left that patio table, disappearing into the near-future.

The Hinterlands presents "The Radicalization Process" at the Play House, 12567 Moran St., Detroit, May 4-6. Email to reserve tickets here: info@thehinterland-sensemble.org

Odds & Ends

Cleaning up... Now that winter's snow – not that we had much this year – is long gone, it's time to clean up this city. And boy do we need a good cleaning, considering the amount of litter and trash in our streets, alleys and yards.

The annual citywide cleanup is Saturday, May 6, and it kicks off at City Hall at 9 a.m. for those who want to be a part of the volunteer force that will spread throughout the city.

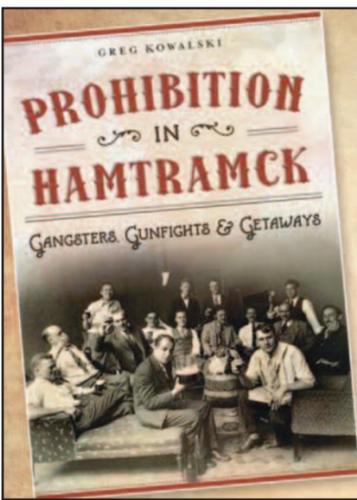

We'll have more information in the coming weeks, but keep that date in mind. If you can't be a part of the official cleanup, at least clean around your house and business – and you don't have to wait until May 6.

Spinning... Our favorite retail holiday is this Saturday, April 22: Record Store Day.

There are about 1,400 independent record stores nationwide, and in Hamtramck there are three: Lo and Behold (on Jos. Campau and Belmont), Detroit Threads (also on Campau but near Trowbridge) and Record Graveyard (2610 Carpenter).

Only Detroit Threads has anything special going on, with rotating DJ's and snacks to snack on. Oh yeah, there will also be special vinyl releases.

No matter what, all three stores have a fantastic selection of records to buy so go out there and get something new for your turntable.

grave challenge that most people can't engage in due to lack of experience and a fear of not being able to succeed. Ms. Powell had demonstrated both experience and the ability to succeed at what she has been appointed to do for our city.

The councilmembers that are having issues with not only renewing Ms. Powell's contract, but having a clear professional understanding of daily professionalism and business ethics, should first of all examine their own competence in city management, their reasons for fighting against what is best for our city, and why it appears to the community their issues with Ms. Powell appear to be personal.

There is an old saying that states: "Cut your nose off to spite your face."

This is what appears to be happening in our city government. The personal needs of the few are pressing to outweigh the needs of the many.

In closing, I'd like to send a strong message to the City Councilmembers who are in objection to renewing Ms. Powell's employment contract: "If it's not broke then don't attempt to fix it."

Our city is working, leave it alone. Put whatever your petty grievances are away, examine the full scope of the matter, show true mature professionalism, work for the betterment of the many and not just a few, and grow up.

Blessings,
Rev. Darla Swint
