Henry Ford Medical Center – Hamtramck has been committed to caring for the residents in this vibrant community for more than 20 years. We continue to offer our same convenient primary care services. And I am happy to tell you about an important new service we are offering at our medical center.

In March Henry Ford’s Center for Autism and Developmental Disabilities (CADD) began offering autism diagnosis and therapy services at our Hamtramck facility. Here families touched by autism or other developmental disabilities have access to a team of specialists who work together to provide an accurate diagnosis and determine the best treatment plan for each child. This third location (CADD also has sites in Southfield and Grosse Pointe Farms), makes it easier for Metro Detroit families to get the care their child needs close to home.

We continue to offer convenient same-day primary care appointments, obstetrics and gynecology care and have lab services on site. And if you need care after hours or on weekends, Henry Ford has five Walk-In Clinics in Dearborn, Detroit, Grosse Pointe Farms, Novi and Sterling Heights, where you can get care for minor medical concerns for the copay of a regular doctor’s visit. Log on to henryford.com/sameday for more information or other same-day care options that will cost you less than a visit to an emergency room.

If you have any questions about any of the services we offer at Henry Ford Medical Center – Hamtramck, please call us at (313) 972-9000.

Yours in good health,

Marianne Langlois, MSA
Director

The Greatness of Hamtramck

I take great delight in The Hamtramck Review once again publishing our annual city business directory.

So many wonderful and exciting things are happening around and throughout our great little city. Let’s begin by considering the many successful festivals and other traditions that take place here, which give our city its unique and unmistakable flavor: events such as the recent and recurring frenzy that was Paczki Day (and the 5K race the Saturday before), Labor Day weekend’s long-running Hamtramck Festival, and the burgeoning musical showcase now rebranded as the Hamtramck Music Festival.

Or how about the St. Florian Strawberry Festival, the relatively new Hamtramck Arts Festival, and the amazing and colorful Bangladeshi Festival, each drawing many visitors from the surrounding metropolitan area to our town. Often, many of these same visitors eventually spill over into the local restaurants and bars, thereby providing a thriving and robust support network for these many small business owners.

Hamtramck needs to continue to focus on, and build from, this empowering strategy, and keep this momentum going. We know there are certain things people always gravitate to, among them food, arts and crafts, and music and live entertainment.

Perhaps you’ve also heard it said before that the world’s universal language is mathematics? Well, one of the facts that math verifies for us is, that the more people we draw into the city, the greater the chance that a certain percentage will ultimately decide to live in the city, with one estimate I saw recently suggesting the ratio at about one for every 20.

These community events and festivals play a key role in showcasing the best and most vibrant side of their hosting city, and they in turn increase the odds in drawing younger persons in; younger persons who might just become the new lifeblood of a town amid its ever-shifting demographic realities.

The repopulation of a city by younger energetic and creative souls in turn will typically have a favorable impact on economic development. More businesses crop up to meet their new and unique needs, and housing stock will often be renovated, rebuilt or even created for and amid this changing tide.

The Hamtramck Review will be there with our weekly newspaper and our annual city business directory, to keep you, the citizens, as up to date as possible on all of this magnificent change and growth.

I want to thank the residents of Hamtramck for their continued support of The Review, and all of our advertisers especially for helping to make this Official City Business Directory a continued success. Patronizing small businesses is one meaningful action that helps keep our city strong and prosperous. We are confident that these advertisers will reap tangible results from being featured in the directory.

It is therefore essential that we all continue to support our local businesses. Let them know if you saw their ad in the directory, as this will encourage this tradition going forward.

Again, we would like to thank you for your continuous loyalty and dedication to your city’s paper of record, The Hamtramck Review.

Most sincerely,

John Ulaj, Publisher

Hamtramck’s future is looking bright for the coming year

By Charles Sercombe

The year 2017 promises to be an exciting one in Hamtramck. Following last year’s debut, the Detroit City Football Club will continue to be a major presence in the coming year. The club attracts upwards of 7,000 rabid fans to its games here at Keyworth Stadium and there is no reason to see a let up of that. In fact, the club is reporting that season tickets are going briskly.

Moving along, what else can we expect in the coming year? Nationally, the story of 2016 was the presidential election. Hamtramck’s turn is this year. This is going to be a big one, and could very likely be another historical moment in the city.

Up for election this year will be the mayor and councilmembers Andrea Karpinski, Ian Perrotta and Mohammed Hassan.

If the past few city elections are any indication, we could see the mayor’s seat and all of the council go to candidates of the Muslim faith. The council and now the school board are comprised of a majority of Muslims.

Mayor Majewski, who is in her third term, is seeking another term. Hamtramck’s once predominant Polish-American community is now a minority – reversing a foundation that has been in place for almost 100 years.

The city’s main demographics are now immigrants from Bangladesh, Yemen and Bosnia – all of whom are mostly of the Muslim faith.

This changeover has not gone unnoticed. For the past year the national and international press has swarmed into town to report on this cultural/political shift. Some of the reporting, as one would expect in the political climate of the day, has not been kind.

Expect to see more of the same.

Speaking of local politics, the contract of City Manager Katrina Powell is set to expire this coming June. She will have been on the job for over two years since being appointed by the city’s former emergency manager.

Whether she wishes to remain on board and whether there are enough councilmembers who support her are two big questions. However, she does have a track record so far of improving the city’s financial outlook. For the first time in several years the city is actually boasting a budget surplus.
It’s also unknown if the city will be un-shackled from the oversight of a Recovery Transition Advisory Board, a holdover from when the city was under the control of a state-appointed emergency manager.

With the city’s financial picture much improved there is a growing question of whether the TAB is needed.

On the economic front, the city saw some interesting gains on the retail level. Jos. Campau’s dormant scene came to life with the arrival of a high-end bicycle shop, the opening of Bank Suey, and the soon-to-be new location for Bon Bon Bon – which offers some of the very best in chocolates.

The former Belmont Bar came back to life as Oloman Café, a mishmash of artist studio and coffee café – all with an Eastern-European flair.

The Polish Market abruptly closed its doors several months ago, but a local Yemeni businessman just as quickly re-opened it.

The folks at Planet Ant rehabbed a former fraternity hall and opened not one but two bars in the space, and adjoining banquet hall.

From what we have heard, there are several exciting deals in the works that will continue to make Hamtramck a retail destination spot.

Well, that is about to be rectified. City Manager Powell has produced, thanks to an engineering study, a detailed list of our streets and alleys and the condition that they are in.

Not only that, each street has been ranked as to which should be fixed first. Powell already began to systematically repair our streets and has this summer’s plan scheduled.

She recently added a list of alleys that will be repaired this coming spring/summer.

We also hear that there will soon be an announcement of a major development deal at the former Missant property on Conant. Hold to your hats, because this could be a big score for the city.

There is a saying in Hamtramck that for every two steps forward, we take one step back. With fingers crossed, it appears the city will be moving only one way: Forward.
The official launch of the “Coming to Hamtramck” mural project is underway at the Hamtramck Historical Museum. The mural is being made possible by a $15,000 initial grant from the Michigan Humanities Council.

When completed, it will be approximately 140 feet long by 8 feet high and be installed at the top of the main floor walls of the Hamtramck Historical Museum. It will be painted by noted Hamtramck mural artist Dennis Orlowski.

Each mural panel will highlight a different ethnic group that has immigrated to Hamtramck over the years. And to ensure accuracy as well as make this a community project, nearly two dozen ethnic groups present in Hamtramck have been asked to directly participate in the project by making suggestions for subject matter and posing as figures to be depicted in the mural. Many of them have already positively responded and will be a part of the project.

The mural is projected to be completed by November of 2017. During the months the project is being done, Orlowski will paint the mural panels at a specially designated area by the front windows of the museum so that persons walking by can see the work in progress.

There also will be a specially designated time when school children will be allowed to paint a panel of the mural. Orlowski is a well-known mural artist who has done works across the Midwest, including several in Hamtramck.

In the not-too-distant future – say, maybe two or three years – you might hear the phrase “Batter Up” at the baseball stadium in Veterans Memorial Park. That stadium has been in the news for the past year about future plans to renovate it and bring back baseball.

For years the grandstands have been an eyesore, falling apart and being torn apart by vandals. All that while city and school officials debated what to do with it: tear it down or build it back up?

A few years ago, something was discovered about the stadium’s past that was a game-changer in what to do with it: The stadium was once the home to the Negro League ball club, the Detroit Stars.

Back in the 1930s, when African-Americans were barred from playing in major league baseball teams, legends like Satchel Paige and Turkey Stearns played here, in their own league.

That was all part of America’s shameful past when segregation was protected by law.

Hamtramck’s stadium is now one of only five surviving stadiums that served the Negro League, as it was called back then.

Since that discovery about Hamtramck’s stadium the Friends of Historic Hamtramck Stadium was formed by baseball history expert Gary Gillette to find ways to raise money to bring the structure back to its former glory.

The effort is paying off. It was announced in 2016 that the National Parks Service, through its African American Civil Rights Program, awarded Hamtramck $50,000 to fund pre-planning for the stadium’s renovation.

The grant will specifically be used to find out the condition of the grandstands.

Gillette said it is not known at this point how much money it will take to fix the structure.

“I’m hoping it’s less than $1 million,” Gillette said.

The stadium was renovated in the 1940s by Wayne County after it was damaged in a wind storm.

The county cut down the length of the stadium and replaced its roof.

That grant will also be teamed up with an online fundraising effort to be held this year with the hopes of raising $50,000. The money raised will be used to recondition the playing field.

Gillette said plans call for the site to host a variety of events and sports outings, including baseball, football, soccer and cricket.

In the meantime, Gillette said he is encouraging the public to pitch in. He is hoping there are some in the area who have family photos of the structure.

“We really do need more photographs and documentation,” he said.
