It's family night this Saturday (July 28).

The Hamtramck Recreation Department is holding an extravaganza called "Hamtramck Colors of Summer Fireworks" at Keyworth Stadium, starting at 6 p.m. and ending at 10 p.m.

The free event will feature rides for kids, games and food. Fireworks will cap the evening.

The Recreation Department, which is part of the Hamtramck Public Schools District, has hosted previous fireworks shows in recent years.

This has always been a fun time for families and it sure beats sitting around the house.

The rain date is for Sunday, July 29.

So far, according to weather forecasts, Saturday will be partly cloudy with temperatures in the high 70s and a zero chance of Hamtramckans old and new poured into the Hamtramck Historical Museum last Thursday to get a glimpse of the new Dennis Orlowski mural that tells the story of immigration in the city, village and township over the past 200-plus years.

Funded with the help of a $15,000 grant from the Humanities Michigan

Council, the idea behind the mural, says museum director Greg Kowalski, "is to get people thinking and talking about the realities of immigration and the impact that it has had on Hamtramck."

Last week's unveiling attracted the single largest group for any event held at the museum, according Kowalski, and showed. Traffic was thick and parking was scarce outside; inside people stood around talking, oth-

On tap: the cost of water

By Sam Corey Special to The Review

Hamtramck residents convened a town hall last Thursday at the Hamtramck Public Library to discuss a wide-range of city updates - most notably the rising cost of water and subsequent water shut-offs.

The event, hosted by the Hamtramck Community Initiative (HCI), was held in part to clarify why water costs have been increasing, and to offer alternative payment options for residents struggling to pay their water bills.

Rodney Johnson, the Director of Public Services for the city, explained the reason for rising costs of water. Water meters, or the small recording device outside of homes that records the amount of water usage per household, are broken, he says.

"We are no longer getting good readings from the meters," said John-ers took nearly every seat closer to the screen where the presentations were to take place. In all, Kowalski says 176 people were counted.

The meters, which send signals to the city reporting water usage every hour, have been providing inaccurate information.

The program began with a surprise: an unexpected guest, former U.S. Sen. Carl Levin, a loyal friend to the city for decades, and wife Barbara came with gifts for the museum.

The senator presented Kowalski with a model of the Thaddeus Kosciuszko statue that was installed at the corner of Michigan and Third; and a letter from two Polish refugees who sought asylum in the U.S. in the early 1980s.

Of the letter, Kowalski says: "It's beautifully done, and it fit perfectly with the immigration theme of the mural."

Later, Mayor Karen Maiewski spoke and Orlowski shared his thoughts on the mural, which contains images that represent native Americans that lived

The narrative continues with pictures of early French and German settlers; African Americans steady numbers from the south for automotive jobs; immigrants from Poland, Ukraine, the former Yugoslavia - including Albanians and Bosnians -Yemen and Bangladesh.

Kowalski says the event reflected what the Hamtramck Historical Commission wants the mural to achieve:

"Immigrants are viewed with so much negativity today that it is important to remember that in a sense we are all immigrants and it was the efforts of immigrants that built Hamtramck.

"This is a process that is going on today. Hamtramck is one of the most diverse cities in Michigan and the nation, so it was fitting that the Hamtramck Historical Museum be the site of this mural. We hope it will be a focal point of the whole community for generations to come."

meters. All of the necessary replacements will be completed by December of this year, Johnson said.

In the meantime, water and sewage prices on the whole continue to rise. Johnson acknowledged that fixed water prices have gone up $20 recently (excluding usage costs). Increasing costs have sparked water shutoffs around the city.

"When we started, there were 1,200 accounts" of water shut-offs recorded. "Now. it's about half that." Johnson said.

Michelle Oberholtzer, a candidate for State Representative in District 4. questioned Johnson on the number of shut-offs that have occurred in the city.

"I'm really concerned about it. I think that we need to know more about how many people are shut off, and to whom is getting shut off," she said.

Although the specific number of water shut-offs in the city is unknown, Johnson approximates that around 100 households have had their water shut off this month.

If a water bill has not been paid, a water "shut off notice" will be sent to that resident's house, giving them 10 days to pay the balance or risk having their water cut off. The amount of money owed to the city for continuing water service - whether it's $5 or $55 - is not relevant.

Ron Orr, director of the non-profit, HCI, which hosted the town hall, has worked with Hamtramck residents and officials to water activist with the help troubled youth, implement community policing projects, and remove graffiti plaguing the city in the early aughts.

This past year, Orr's she said. water costs have surprisingly fallen.

"Well, actually in Hamtramck, the water bills have gone down a little bit. My water bill with my two-family flat has gone down at least 20 percent" from one year prior to this past March, Orr said.

Still, Orr notes that water rates are higher than what they use to be.

"I remember when the water bill for three months would be like a hundredand-something dollars. Now, my water bill is $85 a month."

When questioned as to why water and sewage bills are rising, Orr cited public officials from all levels of government trying to cut spending on important public resources.

"These are all the things I don't understand about our country. Every time we cut federal taxes, we're cutting the paychecks of police departments, of teachers, fire departments, we're cutting the funding to fund our water system," Orr "Municipalities are all strapped for cash and they can no longer carry the burden of letting people go without paying their water bill. All of this comes from federal taxes being lowered that forces state taxes to be lowered all of these burdens get pushed down to a city."

Barbara Beesley, a

and quality care through

People's Water Board in Detroit, and a Hamtramck resident for 18 years, had a different explanation.

"Aging infrastructure,"

Beesley noted that there are better water affordability plans in other cities, like Philadelphia, where residents pay on a tiered system based on a percentage of their household income and size.

In Hamtramck, where poverty levels are high, Beesley doesn't want people to go without the important resource.

"Just trying to imagine what your life would be like if you couldn't wash, if you couldn't bathe, if you couldn't take a drink and hydrate - it's beyond my Beesley imagination," said.

While Beesley suggested that people should pay their water bill based on income, others, like Michelle Oberholtzer, thinks residents should pay based on their usage of water, rather than a fixed rate.

"To me, utility bills should be more variable and be more reflective of your actual consumption," Oberholtzer said.

"One thing that was raised in the city council meeting in the spring was 'well, the way that the City of Hamtramck is charged by the Great Lakes Water Authority is basically fixed for the year' - but that's misrepresentative cause what is charged to the city is subject to change every year based on our usage.

"So if our residents have incentive to conserve, we may conserve and that will bear fruit in the next year's rate set-am deeply saddened by his passing," Majewski said.

Majewski added that the Piast Board will meet soon to discuss the future of the organization.

Dominic Stecula, a former Piast staffmember, remembered Radzilowski for his generosity and humor in a lengthy eulogy he wrote in Facebook.

"'Doctor' was one of the most charming and entertaining people you could ever imagine. He was always full of stories, he was always full of jokes, and he was always full of wisdom.

"He was truly a Renaissance man, the most well-read person I have ever met, who had intelligent things to say just about any topic. And he was a fountain of wisdom about Poland, Polish history, and ethnicity in the United States. You could tell him your last name, and he would tell you something about your family background that you likely didn't know. And not just Polish or European names. He knew everything.

"His commitment to pluralistic society was admirable and much needed in the current political climate. He was the kind of man dedicated to building bridges between ethnic communities of Southeastern Michigan and beyond.

"He was a friend of the Jewish community, of the African-American community, of the Bengali and Yemeni communities, and all the other ethnic groups from Hamtramck and beyond.

"He knew their histories well and was always able to engage with others with respect and friendliness. That allowed him to help solve difficult issues, like the call to prayer issue in Hamtramck several years ago.

"Dr. Radzilowski was a major inspiration for me. Working with him was amazing, I learned something new from him every day. He encouraged me to pursue graduate education and had faith that, at some point, I would become his colleague.

"The first week of working with him for Piast Institute, he signed a copy of his book for me to a "future colleague." I was still doing my undergrad but he saw the potential in me that I did not see myself. He supported my applications to graduate school and when I failed to get into a single program the first time I applied, he encouraged me to try again. I did.

"Now, on Thursday, July 19th, the day before his death, my doctoral dissertation, which I defended several weeks before that, was officially accepted by the University of British Columbia. A day before his passing, I officially became his colleague."

Besides being a scholar and the author of many academic and position papers, Radzilowski served in the military during the Vietnam War. He grew up in Hamtramck.

Radzilowski is survived by his wife, Kathleen; sons, John, Paul and Stefan; sisters, Fran and Cynthia; and brothers, Norbert and Fred; and two grandchildren.

His funeral was held on Wednesday at St. Gerald Catholic Church in Farmington.

He was buried in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery in Southfield.

Stadium renovation cost is high but still do-able

The cost estimate to fix Schools District, will win a up Hamtramck Stadium is in and it's a doozey.

According to a study by SmithGroupJJR, the city will have to find over $18 million to make a long list of improvements and additions.

That is an amount the city cannot possibly afford, nor likely get in any number of grants. But for about $5 million basic repairs to the stadium and the grounds can be made.

It's possible the city, along with its partner in renovating the stadium, multi-million dollar grant from the Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. Foundation.

The Foundation has been awarding communities grants to encourage young people to get more physically active. A number of folks think Hamtramck stands a good chance to win a substantial grant.

No matter what, the city and school district will likely have to kick in some money to make the stadium to become a jewel once again.

We think the investthe Hamtramck Public ment will pay off in the long run. The stadium, without a doubt, will become a cultural attraction a place where sports can be played as well as become the location of live music performances and festivals.

The stadium is only one of a handful still-existing ballparks where the longgone Negro National Baseball League played back in the 1930s before the color barrier was crossed in Major League Baseball.

To paraphrase a famous movie line, if we build it, they will come.

nephews.

During World War II, Edward served his country proudly and honorably in the Unites States Army. He served overseas in Germany, and during his time there took a shine to boxing and playing football.

After his time in the Army, Edward's passion for football continued as he would become the head coach at St. Stanislaus High School in Detroit, before eventually taking on a career in plumbing and working for Wayne County.

Not only did coaching speak to Edward's love of sports, but also to his generous and caring nature. As he went through life, he was an active member of many organizations and groups, including the John W. Smith Old Timers, a group which among its many charitable acts include donating to The Capuchins, a cause that was dear to Edward; as a veteran of WWII, Edward also belonged to the Polish Legion of American Veterans and Lyskawla VFW Post #7546; he was a former member and past president of the Detroit Polish Century Club; and was a member who took to politics with Plumbers Local #98.

As a self-proclaimed "lifelong Democrat," politics played a strong role in Edward's life, especially in the State of Michigan and City of Detroit; also having served as the Deputy Mayor of Hamtramck.

Of all the hats Edward wore, Soldier, Coach, Plumber, Deputy Mayor, his favorite was most likely "Family Man." Edward loved spending time with his family, his children, and grandchildren. Watching his children and grandchildren play sports was one of his greatest joys.

When his family wasn't playing, there was always a Detroit sports team to watch, or University of Notre Dame football. Edward was a wellloved man, who accomplished much, touched the lives of many. He will be missed by all.

ting, but if we literally have no advantage to conserving then we won't, and that can have negative consequences."

Residents struggling to pay their water bill can either receive assistance through the Water Residential Assistance Program (WRAP) or pay via a payment plan.

WRAP, available to individuals in Oakland, Macomb, and Wayne counties, is eligible to anyone that is 150% below the poverty line (or $36,450 in yearly income for a household of four).

Information about WRAP is currently made available in English online, and the total amount of funding available for WRAP applicants in Hamtramck is unknown.

At the end of the meeting, Orr stressed caution for the future of water

"There are countries going to war over water," Orr said, referencing conflict happening in South Africa. "Water is going to be a huge problem going forward."

New mural is a nod to the Detroit City Football Club

Bv Alan Madlane

Hamtramck is rapidly becoming the City of Murals.

Well, that's the way it appears, anyhow. Competition seems so fierce, in fact, that one mural is about to give way to another in the same space.

The space in question is the two-story Scottish Lion Lofts building (formerly known as the Vet Lofts) at 8820 Jos. Campau, on the northeast corner at Goodson. The south side of the building facing Goodson had been previously decorated with another mural several years ago, during the initial frenzy that saw artists come from as far away as New Zealand to decorate some of the city's structures.

Another mural adorns the north wall of the Sheeba Restaurant across Goodson.

The older mural on the 8820 building featured a large eagle flexing its muscular wings, with a banner behind reading "Hamtramck." It has been vandalized often over the years with tags.

The eagle was itself a replacement mural for the most controversial one that arose out of that original Montana Paint Comcontest. pany's infamous "Death of Street Art" mural featuring a casket that many local residents felt negatively impacted the city's image.

The building's owner, John C. Haedrich, says that he has engaged an artist named Kyle Danley, who goes by the street name "Wetiko."

"We are hoping to commence working on the mural this Friday, July 27," Haedrich said via email, adding "It will probably take at least a week."

The mural will feature a predominantly red color scheme and employs a lively soccer motif. The mural is a tribute to the Detroit City Football Club, which hosts its home games down the street at Keyworth Stadium.

A new mural, paying tribute to the Detroit City Football Club, will be created starting this Friday (July 27) at the former Vet Loft building on Jos. Campau and
