Quick Hits

Next Tuesday (Aug. 7) is not only Primary Election Day, it's also National Night Out.

The city will join in the national recognition of public safety departments by hosting a get-together in Zussman Park, across from city hall. The event goes from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Police officers and firefighters will be on hand to talk with the community and show off some of their equipment. There will also be games for kids.

We asked Police Chief Anne Moise to explain the meaning of the event. She said residents are encouraged to keep their porch lights on to provide security for their home and neighborhood.

“We encourage residents to show their support for crime prevention on National Night Out by lighting up the area around their homes. Hopefully, by promoting this idea residents can see what a bright neighborhood looks like and will be more likely to keep the area bright throughout the year.

“National Night Out uses the slogan ‘Lights on means lights out for crime.’”

A major task waits for city officials: Finding money for the Fire Department

By Charles Sercombe

There is some unfinished business in the city's new yearly budget.

That chore will be for city official to find funding for the Fire Department. And if a preliminary discussion is any indication, it could get ugly.

A prelude to that challenge came up when Acting City Manager Kathy Angerer submitted a proposed budget to city council several weeks ago that does not fill four vacant firefighter positions. The firefighters' union is expected to fight that and demand that at least two of the positions be filled.

Fire Chief Danny Hagen told the council that without the two positions filled he cannot guarantee adequate fire service.

Hagen and Councilmember Anam Miah got into a testy exchange about filling the positions and funding in general. At one point Hagen warned the council to not balance the budget on “the back of the Fire Department.”

That's not the only contentious point.

A federally-funded SAFER grant will run out in January of 2019, which is the halfway point in the city's fiscal year.

For the past two years the grant covered the salary costs of 14 firefighters, which totaled $2.3 million.

The department's total budget is $3.3 million for this year.

At this point it is unclear if the city can continue adequate fire service.

A breakdown of what the Fire Department costs the city

By Charles Sercombe

Just how much does it cost to fund the city's Fire Department?

The future of how to cover the cost of the department will be coming up for discussion for city officials as a federal grant, known as SAFER, begins to run out.

That grant covered the salaries of 14 firefighters and has been in place since 2012. Although the grant covered the salaries of 14 firefighters,

Holbrook repaving project is moving forward

By Charles Sercombe

The repaving of Holbrook kicked off as scheduled last Monday.

By now, residents in the area are aware of a major inconvenience in driving on the street. At this point there is only one lane open for traffic going eastbound. There is no lane for westbound traffic.

This is the first phase of the project that will repave the street from Jos. Campau to Gallagher.

After the first phase is completed, work will move between Gallagher and Conant. There is no time estimate on when the second phase begins. Both the first and second phases involve repaving the westbound lane.

There are also two more phases, which involve the eastbound lane.

Residents on Holbrook are invited to park their car just down the street at the Town Center shopping plaza at Jos. Campau and Holbrook.

For those who have a garage in the rear you can still get to it through the alley.

Included in the project is the replacement of water and sewer lines. Work is expected to be completed by late November.

The project will cost $1 million, of which the federal government is paying 80 percent. The city is kicking in the remaining 20 percent out of its yearly street repair fund.

In general work will occur Mondays through Fridays, starting at 7 a.m. and ending around 6 p.m. There will be occasional Saturday work.

As with any general road work, there will be a dust issue. A water truck will be on hand to dampen down the dirt that is stirred up.

Candidates aim for Lansing

By Charles Sercombe

Several Hamtramck candidates have high hopes about next Tuesday's Primary Election.

If they win the Democratic nomination, it means they will likely go on to win the November election.

The seats for State Representative and State Senator in the Hamtramck district have traditionally always been won by Democratic nominees. The city's district has been a staunch Democratic stronghold for years.

The State Senate race for this district is unusual this year. Several candidates are running for the remainder of former State Sen. Bert Johnson's term, which ends in January of 2019.

Johnson, 44, stepped down from his office last year after being found guilty of a felony. He admitted he paid a “ghost” employee with taxpayer money to be a member of his staff.

The problem was, however, the so-called employee did not do any work. Instead, the hiring was done to pay off a debt Johnson owed to the employee.

That was the second felony conviction in his life. He held up Oakland Hills Country Club when he was ceiving the grant. But even if it does, the grant program's funding formula has changed, said Fire Chief Hagen.

He said going forward the grant pays for only 75 percent of the salary cost. The city would have to come up with the remainder.

Department-wise, firefighters and police officers are among the top earners in the city.

Out of the firefighter staff of 2017, seven were paid in the $90,000 range a year. Another four were paid over $80,000, seven were in the $70,000 range, two were paid over $60,000, five earned over $50,000 and two were paid over $30,000, while one was new on staff and worked only part of the year brought in over $11,000.

The highest-paid firefighter earns a little over $99,000 a year.

That information came from a Freedom of Information Act request submitted by The Review.

Hamtramck's department also has a work schedule where firefighters work a little over two weeks out of the month. Their work days are around the clock with sleeping quarters on the second floor of the building.

In this initial budget discussion, it also came to light that the department's service runs are mostly in Detroit.

A couple of years ago the department entered into a unique agreement with Detroit and Highland Park to answer calls to those cities, but the range for mutual service was supposed to be limited to one mile from outside Hamtramck's city limits. However, Hamtramck has been responding to calls in Detroit past that one-mile limit – up to three miles.

In all there were over 800 runs in 2017, which Hagen admitted it was “10 to 1” in Detroit's favor. That prompted Councilmember Anam Miah to comment, “That doesn't sound like mutual aid to me.”

Hagen conceded “it looks lopsided, and it is.”

In exchange, Hamtramck is guaranteed crews from Highland Park and Detroit when there is a fire here. That arrangement came in handy over a year ago when a fierce house fire on Trowbridge – whipped up by a strong wind – threatened to spread to nearby houses.

But in truth, there are relatively few serious fire service calls in Hamtramck.

This arrangement has raised concern over the wear and tear of the city's fire trucks and the possibility of firefighters being injured on the job outside of Hamtramck.

The city's employment contract with the firefighters' union runs until 2020. Until a new contract is negotiated, the city is obligated to continue funding at its present level.

But there are some options out there if city officials can't find funding within its present budget.

Chief Hagen is in favor of joining up with a public safety authority that includes the communities of Eastpointe and Hazel Park. Voters in those communities agreed to form the authority at a cost of an extra 14 tax mills per homeowner.

The two communities share only the tax monies generated from the authority and do not exchange fire fighting services between each other.

Hagen would like to have Hamtramck voters to decide on whether to join the authority. That arrangement would also require voters in Eastpointe and Hazel Park to agree on the deal.

Hamtramck Fire Captain William Dickens also suggested another funding source surplus to cover department costs – tapping into the city's projected $6 million budget surplus.

“Try to figure out a solution with the fund balance,” he said in reference to the city's budget surplus.

City officials point out that the surplus was largely due to several one-time-only financial windfalls – such as some temporary vacant department head positions and an unexpected increase from income tax collection.

19 years old.

But a record of felony convictions isn't stopping one candidate, Brian Banks, from seeking Johnson's job.

Banks also resigned last year as a State Representative after taking a plea deal for falsifying financial records to get a loan. That deal was reduced to a misdemeanor. Prior to that conviction he had eight felony convictions for credit card fraud and writing bad checks.

Also in the running is George Cushingberry, who has had his own legal troubles. He recently lost his license to practice law. Cushingberry is a former state representative, Wayne County Commissioner and Detroit City Councilmember.

Locally, Hamtramck City Councilmember Anam Miah is seeking to win the seat. He is joined on the ballot with fellow Hamtramck resident Abraham Alyash.

Both are running to take a full term, starting in January. Miah, however, is not seeking the partial term.

In the State Representative race, Hamtramck City Councilmember Saad Al-masmari is on the ballot along with fellow Hamtramckans Michele Oberholtzer, Syed Rob and Justin Jessop. One candidate, MD Rabbi Alam, listed his address as a post office box in Hamtramck. It is unclear if he is a Hamtramck resident.

The seat is being vacated by Rep. Rose Mary Robinson, who is being termed out. Her son, Isaac Robinson, is seeking to keep the position in the family.

Another Hamtramck resident, former Councilmember Mohammed Hassan, is challenging longtime incumbent Martha Scott for her position on the Wayne County Commission.

Also of Hamtramck interest is a city charter revision proposal.

That proposal would loosen up the qualifications needed to be appointed the city manager. Instead of re-

In Our Opinion

Tuesday’s Primary Election will determine who goes to Lansing

Next Tuesday is election day, and for two positions in state government, this election will determine who goes to Lansing.

The seats for State Representative and State Senator have traditionally been filled by Democratic candidates, meaning whoever wins the Democratic primary election next Tuesday will likely win in November when they square off with their Republican challengers.

We have Hamtramck candidates in both races. We wish them the best. So far, it looks a like a toss up on who will win in those two elections.

Also of local concern is a charter revision proposal on the ballot, which strangely no one has talked about. Particularly curious is that the very people who want the change — a majority of city councilmembers — have done nothing to promote it.

The charter proposal will open up the qualifications of who can be appointed city manager. The current requirement have proven to be too restrictive in the city’s ability to hire an otherwise qualified candidate.

Give this proposal some serious thought. No matter what, be sure to go out and vote this Tuesday, and definitely come back in November for very important Congressional elections.

New school year ushers in new principal for Tau Beta School

By Alan Madlane

Nabil Nagi has been tapped to become the new principal of Tau Beta School here in Hamtramck.

He replaces the interim principal, Terry Taylor. Nagi’s appointment was unanimously approved by the school board on June 13.

The school is located in the city’s southend, at 3056 Hanley, between Jos. Campau and Gallagher. The school opened its doors to the public on Saturday, January 27 and held its first official day of classes two days later. It took over the space of a failed charter school, American International Studies.

The building itself dates to 1927, when four Grosse Pointe teens

Recreation Department’s fireworks show is a blast

Scenes from Saturday’s fireworks show held at Keyworth Stadium.

A breakdown of what the Fire Department costs the city

fighters, recently the city has not filled two vacant positions.

The last payment the city received was in 2016 for $2.3 million. The money remaining in the pot, about $1.2 million, will be spent by January of 2019 – less than six months from now.

This year’s city budget, which covers 2018-19, calls for spending $3.3 million for the department.

Most of that total budget goes for salaries, benefits and pensions.

Here’s the breakdown on how the money is spent:

- Firefighters’ salary – Over $1.5 million (does not include the chief’s position)
- Fire chief’s salary – $91,000
- Firefighters’ benefits – over $600,000
- Other costs, not including salaries – $118,000

By Charles Sercombe

Thousands of folks got a special mid-summer treat last Saturday evening.

The Hamtramck Recreation Department held a “Hamtramck Colors of Summer Fireworks” event at Keyworth Stadium.

Kids got to enjoy rides and even go down a zip line.

Several performers hit the stage as well, including Hamtramck’s own Danny D.

To cap off the night, on-lookers were treated to about 30 minutes worth of fireworks – which some said was the best show in recent years.
