Summer programs at Veterans Park

This is going to be a special summer for adults and kids.

And it's all in celebration of Hamtramck's centennial.

The Hamtramck Parks Conservancy (HPC) announced a series of events planned for its "Summer in the Park" series, which features programs for kids and adults at Veteran's Park, located at 8648 Jos. Campau Ave.

The HPC is partnering with GHD, General Motors and Hamtramck Public Schools to sponsor a free three-day STEAM Camp for students from Hamtramck and Detroit, for ages 9-14, on July 12-14.

The event will be held from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

STEAM stands for Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts and Mathematics.

"The STEAM Camp will be a fun and active learning space for students who are interested in Science, Arts and Sustainability around the park," says Dichondra Johnson, Executive Director & CEO of Hamtramck Parks Conservancy.

A daily lunch and a camp T-shirt will be provided for each student. To register for this fun and affordable summer camp experience, use the following link:

Happy 4th of July Independence Day

TOAST of the TOWN

A day of poetry and a night for a blowout

By Charles Sercombe

Poetry was in the air Saturday afternoon.

The first cultural event in a series called "Our City Series" kicked off in the rose garden area of Immaculate Conception Church, and was sponsored by the Hamtramck Arts and Cultural Commission.

About 50 people came out on a blistering hot day, but they were able to sit under a tent and in a largely shaded yard. It wasn't bad at all, as long as you stayed out of direct sunshine.

Plus, there were plenty of fresh beverages to keep you hydrated.

Several readers presented poetry and other writings. They represented the ethnic make-up of the city: Yemeni, Bangladeshi, Polish, Ukrainian and more.

The first reader was Hamtramck's own Mayor Ameer Ghalib. The mayor, a practicing nurse by trade, is a poetry writer himself, but he chose to read a poem by fellow Yemeni poet Dr. Abdulaziz Almakaleh.

Ghalib read the poem in both Yemeni and English. It was titled "Sanaa," a tribute to Yemen's largest city that the poet was forced to leave because of political unrest.

The theme of oppression was a thread through a few of the writings offered for the day – something many immigrants in Hamtramck can relate to.

Another set of verses called "Poems from the Gulag" was read by Myroslava Stefaniuk.

Later that night, Cathie

Interim city manager appointed

By Charles Sercombe

A familiar face will be filling in as city manager.

In a special city council meeting Wednesday, Max Garbarino was tapped as interim city manager.

Garbarino is currently serving as the city's director of community safety and services.

City Manager Kathy Angerer recently announced her resignation, effective July 15. She has said that she has a new job, but declined to say where.

Max Garbarino

Garbarino is the city's former police chief.

According to the council resolution hiring Garbarino, which was presented by City Councilmember Mohammed Hassan, Garbarino will be paid $10,000 a month and will continue to receive his current benefit package.

In the meantime, the council also set into motion a request for proposals from search companies to find "qualified and experienced city managers" to apply for the job.

That process can take a few months, according to past experiences the city went through.

Angerer has held various roles in the city, until she was appointed interim city manager in 2017 after former City Manager Katrina Powell's contract was not renewed by the then-council.

Gordon hosted her bar's last night blowout. Toast of the Town couldn't attend, but from the photos we saw posted on Facebook, it looked like a ton of fun.

One post from former Hamtramck police officer Dennis Whittie caught our attention. He recounted his first introduction to Cathie while he was on patrol.

We won't get into the bawdy greeting he had with Cathie at the bar, but it's safe to talk about his request for something to quench his thirst.

Cathie handed him a soda, but in one sip Dennis realized it was so much more than plain old soda. Being on duty, he found a way to discreetly pour it out in the bathroom.

That's pure Cathie – always making her guests feel at home. Dennis, by the way, is now an attorney with an office in Ferndale.

Here's to a happy retirement for Cathie and her hubby Lew.

When it comes to good food and great times, Hamtramck has plenty to offer. In this column, we'll talk about what's happening at our bars, restaurants and other events throughout the city

Hamtramck Veteran's Park tennis courts will be in action as well. The USTA Tennis Association is partnering with local tennis enthusiasts to bring the tennis magic back to this popular and historic tennis venue this summer.

The tennis program is hosted by the Hamtramck Parks Conservancy, Hamtramck Parks & Recreation Department, and Hamtramck Community Tennis Association.

The program starts in July.

Three classes will be offered: Tennis 101 for youth (ages 6-10), Tennis 101 for teens (ages 11-17), and Tennis 101 for adults (ages 18+). These introductory tennis classes will be led by a USPTA Elite Tennis Professional, Brian Anteck and his staff.

New and returning players are encouraged to register and have some fun on the courts, using the following link:

In addition to the STEAM Camp and the USTA Tennis Program, baseball enthusiasts and spectators are invited to visit the newly refurbished

Hamtramck Stadium for free, open-to-the public baseball tournaments, sponsored by the USSSA (United States Specialty Sports Association) and the FFAST (Fun American Amateur Sports Tournaments).

The tournaments feature travel teams from around the state and Midwest every weekend during the summer.

Visit the HPC events calendar: (<https://hamtramckparks.com/events/>) for more information.

The HPC and the Friends of Historic Hamtramck Stadium (FHHS) are working to provide a vital community resource and recreational asset.

"We are creating an inclusive space here in Hamtramck, where future stars can shine bright, like the park's legacies before them, through educational, cultural and recreational programming honoring the history of Negro League Baseball, competitive, and amateur sports in Hamtramck and Detroit," says Johnson.

The Hamtramck Parks Conservancy (HPC) is a collaboration between the city, the public schools, and other community partners seeking to improve green spaces and facilities for public use; and to provide health, educational and recreational opportunities for city residents.

Historic park tours and info on stadium facility rentals for events are available upon request.

Covid update: Lax health safety measures have led to Covid deaths

By Charles Sercombe

The number of weekly Covid-19 cases in Hamtramck remains in the double digits.

There were 31 new cases here in the past week, according to Wayne County health officials.

Over the past two years, since the pandemic broke out, Hamtramck has had 5,122 covid cases (as of Monday).

The number of deaths during this period remains at 74.

Given the city's population of almost 30,000, this number of cases represents 17 percent of the population.

For many in the nation, the covid issue has faded into the background as a virus that can be caught like any other. But, it remains a top killer in the US. About 300 people are still dying each day from Covid-19 in this country.

The Michigan Department of Health and Human Services said that last week there were 174 deaths from the disease. During the past two years, Michigan, almost 37,000 people have died from Covid.

Health officials still recommend masking up in public, keeping a distance from others and washing your hands often.

The public seems oblivious to these recommendations. In the metro area, you see most people are going unmasked, and congregating in large numbers in restaurant, bars and public events.

Vaccinations and boosters are also recommended, and vaccinations are now available for youngsters 6 months old and up.

Interim city manager appointed

Angerer eventually became the city's full-time city manager in 2018. Her current contract has no expiration date. According to her contract, she had to give at least a 30-day notice that she would be leaving.

Hamtramck has had four city managers, and also a few interim city managers, since the city changed its charter to a city manager form of government.

The city had been under the control of state-appointed emergency managers because of past financial crises.

Rededication of stadium ushers in a new era

Things just keep getting better and better for the historic Hamtramck baseball stadium.

Last week, officials from Wayne County, Detroit and Hamtramck, plus a host of special guests, were part of a rededication of the stadium.

The stadium has come a long way in recent years. Once the stadium's historical past was discovered several years ago, the city began to receive several grants to renovate it.

The stadium's grandstands have been repaired, and a new field was installed – and once again, baseball is being played there.

Its history is wrapped up in a dark period of the country, when African-Americans were not allowed to play in the all-white Major Leagues.

So, African-Americans formed their own league and quite frankly, boasted far superior players who made the game even more exciting.

Hamtramck Stadium was built in 1930 for the Negro League. The Detroit Stars played their home games there.

That era died when, in the 1950s, more and more African-Americans were hired by Major League teams. Unfortunately, the stadium slowly began to fall into disrepair.

It is now a jewel for the entire metro area to enjoy. Down the road, it is hoped more funding will come in to finish transforming the park to not only host baseball games, but also all sorts of sports competitions, as well as other entertainment such as live music.

The amount of love showered on the stadium over the past week was heartwarming, to say the least.

Here's to many happy years for the stadium.

Odds & Ends

Election help... The Aug. 2 Primary Election is coming up quickly in Hamtramck.

And if you can spare some time, the city needs election workers, which are paid positions. The pay is $200 for poll workers and $250 for precinct chairs, plus $20 for training.

If interested, give the city clerk a call at (313) 800-5233, extension 821.

Eid festival... Mark your calendar for July 13 and 14. That's when the Hamtramck Eid Festival will take place, in the Veterans Park area.

The festival is geared to families, and features rides, games, food and live performances.

It's hosted by the Iman Islamic Complex.

Discussion... The always-piquing Profs and Pints lecture (with drinking) series is having another event, again at the Ant Hall.

For this one, Schoolcraft College Associate Prof of Philosophy and conspiracy theory expert Dr. Mark Huston will offer up a tantalizing quickie course on, not so much "what" to think about various assertions, but rather "how" to think, well, better about them.

Dr. Huston is said to garner consistent rave reviews from his college course students.

This all goes down (like a frosty beverage) at the Ant Hall on Sunday, July 10 at 6:30 p.m. Doors open then, with the talk beginning by 7 p.m.

Check out advance tickets on planetant.com, or by going to the Ant Hall (they're open many evenings, but we'd say to call first to 313-365-4255; they're located at 2320 Caniff St.).

Those early tickets are only $12, but they'll be $15 at the door on the day of (or $13, with a student ID).

Dr. Huston will even bring into the discussion examples from popular works such as The Manchurian Candidate, National Treasure and The Da Vinci Code to make points about what we can, and cannot, know about areas of religion, politics, and business.

Sounds invigorating! See you there!

Hamtramck farewell letter: A reflection on home and community

By Michele Oberholtzer Zimmerman

I will be moving from Hamtramck soon.

This is a move with a reason, this is a move on purpose, this is a move toward the life my husband Jeff and I are trying to build. But for all the reasons my head understands, the thought of it still hurts my heart.

Moving is something

I used to do like a knight in a game of chess- jerking across the board in a mixture of defense and offense without any obvious direction. It was casual

Hamtramck farewell letter:
A reflection on home and community

and often easy.

This move feels more like a transplant. I’m wincing already in anticipation of the roots I will have to rip and tear to leave this place. I am mourning both my memories of the past and my dreams of a future here that will never be.

After years of wandering, I let myself make a home in this house, so no wonder it hurts to leave it. As one of my favorite authors, Thomas Lynch, says: “grief is the tax we pay on our attachments.”

I thought I was ready to leave but as winter changed to spring, the move got closer and Hamtramck got more precious to me. Trees and gardens were flowering, my neighbors and I spent our evenings outside, cross-pollinating each other’s lives with conversation, gardening tasks, and shared food.

I am eight months pregnant, and they marvel at my growing belly, asking me questions about how “we” are doing and encouraging me on.

These people would love my son just by virtue of watching him grow up but most will be strangers to him. And, yes, there will be neighbors in the new neighborhood too, but there is just something about the particular density of Hamtramck that makes it special.

I have become extremely comfortable with exactly this level of spacing that allows for conversation across the street, yard to yard, or from porch to sidewalk. The sheer presence of so many families means more pedestrians, more kids at play, more life, move living.

As neighbors we are witnesses and participants in each other’s lives. Many of my neighbors I don’t know by name, but I care about them, and they me. This is the essence that lets me sleep so soundly at night, with my door unlocked, and that brings extra joy to my life in countless spontaneous, small, special ways.

This is what I am giving up.

What a lot of moping! I have to shake myself out of this and remember that this is my choice. No one is forcing me to go, and I have an embarrassment of riches to look forward to.

I have an amazing husband. We will become parents in July, god willing, and we have been working on a new home for a year that we get to make ours. It’s all a beautiful gift except for the fact that to make a new home means to leave another behind.

Hamtramck is not perfect, right?

I am exhausted by the litter, the same old pot-holes, the constant anxiety of walking and driving amid terrifying speeding. I get antsy for open spaces, with a horizon, a view, and space for our dog to run. I hate the flooding and all the work I have not done (and will never do) on my old house.

I hate the casual racism that people feel so free to express “from one white person to another.” I grind my teeth at the water bills, the stupid parking meters, the tyranny of the old assessor’s office, the accidental libertarianism of a part-time government.

But even in many of our problems I find something to appreciate. I love how these local problems call us in. How natural it feels to try to tackle them, because addressing them feels accessible.

I got a thrill seeing my husband get “radicalized” last summer when the construction on Caniff routed countless careless speeding cars down our street.

We complain because we care, and something about our compact proximity contributes to the feeling that just maybe we can do something about it. There are so many ways to be involved here.

I have intervened in domestic disputes, cleaned up trash, called out litter-bugs, helped with property taxes, water bills and foreclosure issues, mowed people’s lawns, and given many a lecture from my car window to explain that the right lane on Caniff is not for passing but for turning.

Most recently, I’ve enjoyed knocking on doors downstream from the parking enforcement officer to warn people they are about to get a ticket on street sweeping day!

It goes without saying, many people here have helped me, too. This network of care, responsibility, and reciprocity is what I appreciate so much about this place.

I was full of doubt and fear when I first moved here. I really did not know if this was what I wanted, but I did know that I was sick of constantly moving, that this place had potential, and I was willing to give it a chance.

I was inspired by the old man, Ben Jaros, who preceded me in this home after spending each of his 98 years here. It gave me the clue that home isn’t something you find just by searching, it’s something you build by staying. And that’s exactly how it’s been for me. I have grown up in this home.

I arrived as a jobless vagrant divorcee. Almost immediately after arriving, I found a job that actually paid me to do the work I’d been volunteering in for years. I was able to buy the house. I was able to offer shelter to countless roommates, friends, people in a tight spot, and a refugee family who loves this house as much as I do, since it was their first in America.

I have run for public office here, written articles and stories in the local paper, sang songs in the coffee shops and knocked on hundreds of my neighbors’ doors for various reasons. I had my first pet, dear Alto, who made me happy to come home every day. I wove myself and was woven into this dense fabric of community.

When I first met my husband Jeff, I was that groundless lost person. I needed him in a way that wasn’t healthy. I saw the potential for a relationship with him, but it was as though we couldn’t properly love each other because he was too busy rescuing me and I was too busy trying to become someone who didn’t need rescuing.

We were apart for a long time. When we reunited, I had been in this home a few years and I was a much more grounded person. With a lot of courage and chemistry, we gave it another shot, and this place has grown from being my home to ours. I'm so grateful I've gotten to share it with him. A few weeks ago, Jeff was out late working on the new house and I took the dog for a walk. It was a beautiful night with a breeze. I had no less than three conversations with neighbors- all strangers- enjoying the evening air. I came home to my gorgeous spiraea bushes that had just come into bloom and smiled to see them, one more year. I started doing laundry and listening to music when a song came on that I hadn't heard in awhile,

Hamtramck farewell letter: A reflection on home and community

"The Eye" by Brandi Carlisle. I used to love to sing it at Cafe 1923. I sang aloud while I folded until I arrived at a line in the third chorus that immediately choked in my throat: "you might make it further, if you learn to stay." I started crying on the spot. That was my line! That was the mantra that gave me courage to put down roots here. That was my thesis and final message in my first "Hamtramck Love Letter" and it's a lesson I take to heart. After the tears passed, I went through another wave of fear. If I believe this lesson, how can I leave? Am I making a terrible mistake? Throughout most of these past few months, I have been trying to figure out how to become absolutely sure that it is the right decision to leave, and the certainty has eluded me. But now I recall another old lesson – I don't have to be sure. Does this new path have potential? Absolutely. And am I willing to give it a chance? Apparently so. Today, as before, I have the courage to risk making a mistake. I will leave behind the shelter of this special place with eternal gratitude to it for helping me get something worth sacrificing it for.
